- The prison strong.
Within whose keep the captive knights were laid:
Was one partition of the palace-wall. Dryden.
2. Guardianship; restraint.
Youth is least looked into when they stand in most need of good keep and regard. Afham.
KE'EPER. n. f. [from keep.]
1. One who holds any thing for the use of another.
The good old man having neither reason to dissuade, nor hopes to persuade, received the things with the mind of a keeper, not of an owner. Sidney.
2. One who has prisoners in custody.
The keeper of the prison, call to him. Shakespeare.
• To now
With horns exalted stands, and seems to lowe:
A noble charge; her keeper by her side
To watch her walks his hundred eyes apply'd. Dryden.
A pleasant beverage he prepar'd before,
Of wine and water mix'd, with added store
Of opium; to his keeper this he brought,
Who swallowed unware the sleepy draught. Dryden.
3. One who has the care of parks, or beasts of chase.
There is an old tale goes, that Herne the hunter,
Sometime a keeper here in Windsor forests,
Doth all the Winter-time, at still of midnight,
Walk round about an oak with ragged horns. Shakespeare.
The first fat buck of all the season's sent,
And keeper takes no fee in compliment. Dryden.
4. One that has the superintendence or care of any thing.
Hilkiah went into Hildah, keeper of the wardrobe. 2 King.
KE'EPER of the great seal. [custos magni sigilli, Latin.] Is a lord by his office, and called lord keeper of the great seal of England, &c. and is of the king's privy-council, under whose hands pass all charters, commissions, and grants of the king, strengthened by the great or broad seal, without which seal all such instruments by law are of no force; for the king is, in interpretation and intendment of law, a corporation, and therefore passeth nothing firmly, but under the great seal.
This lord keeper, by the statute of 5 Eliz. c. 18. hath the like jurisdiction, and all other advantages, as hath the lord chancellor of England. Cowell.
KE'EPERSHIP. n. f. [from keeper.] Office of a keeper.
The common goal of the shire is kept at Launceston:
this keepership is annexed to the constableness of the castle.
Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
KEG. n. f. [caque, French.] A small barrel, commonly used for a fifth barrel.
KELL. n. f. A sort of pottage. Ainsl. It is so called in Scotland, being a soupe made with fireweed greens.
KELL. n. f. The omentum; that which inwraps the guts.
The very weight of bowels and kell, in fat people, is the occasion of a rupture. Wifeman's Surgery.
KELP. n. f. A salt produced from calcined sea-weed.
In making alum, the workmen use the ashes of a sea-weed called kelp, and urine. Boyle on Colours.
KE'LSON. n. f. [more properly keelson.] The wood next the keel.
We have added clove pillars in the royal ships, which being fastened from the keelson to the beams of the second deck, keep them from settling, or giving way. Raleigh.
KELTER. n. f. [He is not in ketter, that is, he is not ready;
from kitter, to gird, Danish. Skinner.]
To KEMB. v. a. [comban, Saxon; kammen, German: now written, perhaps less properly, to comb.] To separate or disentangle by a denticulated instrument.
Yet are the men more loose than they,
More kemb'd and bath'd, and rubb'd and trim'd.
More sleek. Benj. Johnson.
Thy head and hair are sleek;
And then thou kemb'st the tuzzes on thy cheek. Dryden.
To KEN. v. a. [kenan, Saxon; kanan, Dutch, to know.]
1. To see at a distance; to descry.
At once as far as angels ken, he views
The dismal situation, waste and wild. Milton's Par. Lost.
The next day about evening we saw, within a kenning, before us thick clouds, which did put us in some hope of land.
Bacon's New Atlantis.
If thou ken'st far from,
Among the Pleiads, a new-kindled star;
'Tis she that shines in that propitious light. Dryden.
We ken them from afar, the sitting fun
Plays on their shining arms. Addison.
2. To know.
'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gate.
Now plain I ken whence love his life begun:
Sure he was born some bloody butcher's son,
Bred up in flames. Gay's Poet.
KEN. n. f. [from the verb.] View; reach of sight.
Lo! within a ken, our army lies. Shakespeare. Henry IV.
When from the mountain top Pifanio shew'd thee,
Thou wast within a ken. Shakespeare. Cymbeline.
It was a hill

- Of paradise the highest; from whose top
The hemisphere of earth, in clearest ken,
Stretch'd out to th' amplest reach of prospect, lay. Milton.
He soon
Saw within ken a glorious angel stand. Milton.
Rude, as their ships, was navigation then;
No useful compass or meridian known:
Coasting they kept the land within their ken,
And knew the North but when the pole-star shone. Dryd.
When we consider the reasons we have to think, that what lies within our ken is but a small part of the universe, we shall discover an huge abyss of ignorance. Locke.
KE'NNEL. n. f. [chenil, French.]
1. A cot for dogs.
A dog sure, if he could speak, had wit enough to describe his kenel. Sidney.
From forth the kenel of thy womb hath crept
A hell-hound, that doth hunt us all to death. Shakespeare.
The dainties remain within their station, which, by reason of the naftiness of the beastly multitude, might be more fitly termed a kenel than a camp. Hayward.
2. A number of dogs kept in a kennel.
A little herd of England's tim'rous deer,
Maz'd with a yelping kenel of French curs. Shakespeare.
3. The hole of a fox, or other beast.
4. [Kenel, Dutch; chenil, Fr. canalis, Latin.] The watercourse of a street.
Bad humours gather to a bile; or, as divers kenels flow to one sink, so in short time their numbers increase. Hoy.
He always came in so dirty, as if he had been dragged through the kenel at a boarding-school. Arbutnot.
To KE'NNEL. v. n. [from kenel.] To lie; to dwell: used of beasts, and of man in contempt.
Yet, when they list, would creep,
If ought disturb'd their noise, into her womb,
And kenel there; yet there fill bark'd and howl'd Within, unien. Milton's Par. Lost, b. ii.
The dog kenelled in a hollow tree, and the cock roosted upon the boughs. L'Estrange's Fables.
KEPT. pret. and part. pass. of keep.
KERCH'EF. n. f. [kercheif, Chaucer; carore, to cover, and chef, the head; and hence a handkerchief to wipe the face or hands.]
1. A head dress.
I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond; thou hast the right arch'd bend of the brow, that becomes the tire vaultant.
—A plain kerchief, Sir John; my brows become nothing else. Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor.
The proudest kerchief of the court shall rest
Well satisfy'd of what they love the best. Dryden.
2. Any cloth used in dress.
O! what a time have you chose out, brave Caius,
To wear a kerchief. Shakespeare. Julius Caesar.
Every man had a large kerchief folded about the neck.
Hayward.
KERCH'EFED. } adj. [from kerchief.] Dressed; hooded.
KERCH'EFIT. }
The evening comes
Kerchief in a comely cloud,
While racking winds are piping loud. Milton.
KERF. n. f. [ceonpan, Saxon, to cut.]
The fawn-away slit between two pieces of stuff is called a kerf. Moxon's Mech. Exercise.
KERMES. n. f.
Kermes is a roundish body, of the bigness of a pea, and of a brownish red colour, covered when most perfect with a purplish grey dust. It contains a multitude of little distinct granules, soft, and when crushed yield a scarlet juice. It is found adhering to a kind of holm oak, and till lately was generally understood to be a vegetable excrement; but we now know it to be the extended body of an animal parent, filled with a numerous offspring, which are the little red granules. Hill.
KERN. n. f. [an Irish word.] Irish foot soldier; an Irish boor.
Out of the fry of these rake-hell hordeboys, growing up in knavery and villainy, are their kearn supplied. Spenser.
No sooner justice had with valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping kerms to trust their heels,
But the Norweyan lord, surveying advantage,
Began a fresh assault. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
If in good plight these Northern kerms arrive,
Then does fortune promise fair. Phillips's Britain.
KERN. n. f. A hand-mill consisting of two pieces of stone, by which corn is ground. It is still used in some parts of Scotland.
To KERN. v. n. [probably from kernel, or, by change of a vowel, corrupted from corn.]
1. To harden as ripened corn.
When the price of corn falleth, men break no more ground than will supply their own turn, wherethrough it falleth out that an ill kernel or faved harvest soon emptyeth their old store. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
2. To

KEY

2. To take the form of grains; to granulate.
The principal knack is in making the juice, when sufficiently boiled, to key or granulate. Gruu.
KERNEL. n. f. [cynel, a gland, Saxon; karne, Dutch;
cerneau, French.]
The edible substance contained in a shell.
As brown in hue
As hazle nuts, and sweeter than the kernel. Shakespeare.
There can be no kernel in this light nut; the foul of this man is his clothes. Shakespeare. All's well that ends well.
The kernel of the nut serves them for bread and meat, and the shells for cups. More.
2. Any thing included in a husk or integument.
The kernel of a grape, the fig's small grain,
Can cloath a mountain, and o'erhade a plain. Denham.
Oats are ripe when the straw turns yellow and the kernel hard. Mortimer's Husbandry.
3. The seeds of pulpy fruits.
I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.—And fowing the kernel of it in the sea, bring forth more islands. Shakespeare. Tempest.
The apple inclosed in wax was as fresh as at the first putting in, and the kernel continued white. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
4. The central part of any thing upon which the ambient strata are concentered.
A solid body in the bladder makes the kernel of a stone. Arb.
5. Knobby concretions in childrens flesh.
To KE'RNEL. v. n. [from the noun.] To ripen to kernels.
In Staffordshire, garden-rouncivals fown in the fields kernel well, and yield a good increase. Mortimer's Husbandry.
KE'RNELLY. adj. [from kernel.] Full of kernels; having the quality or resemblance of kernels.
KERNELWORT. n. f. An herb. Ainsworth.
KE'RSY. n. f. [kerfaye, Dutch; cariste, French.] Coarse stuff.
Taffata phrases, silken terms precise,
I do forswear them; and I here protest,
Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd
In rusted years, and honest kerfye noes. Shakespeare.
His lackey with a linnen flock on one leg, and a kerfye boot-hose on the other. Shakespeare. Taming of the Shrew.
The fame wool one man felts it into a hat, another weaves
it into cloth, and another into kerfye or serge. Hale.
Thy kerfye doublet spreading wide,
Drew Cicely's eye aside. Gay.
KEST. The preter tense of cast. It is still used in Scotland.
Only that noise heav'n's rolling circles kest. Fairfax.
KE'STREL. n. f. A little kind of bastard hawk. Hammer.
In his kestrel kind,
A pleasing vein of glory, vain did find,
To which his flowing tongue, and troublous spirit,
Gave him great aid. Fairy Queen.
Kites and kestrels have a resemblance with hawks. Bacon.
KE'CHI. n. f. [from caichio, Italian, a barrel.] A heavy ship.
I wonder
That such a kech can with his very bulk
Take up the rays of th' beneficial sun,
And keep it from the earth. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.
KE'TTLE. n. f. [ceel, Saxon; ketel, Dutch.] A vessel in which liquor is boiled. In the kitchen the name of pot is given to the boiler that grows narrower towards the top, and of kettle to that which grows wider. In authors they are confounded.
The fire thus form'd, the fets the kettle on;
Like burnish'd gold the little teether shone. Dryden.
KE'TTLEDROM. n. f. [kettle and drum.] A drum of which the head is spread over a body of brass.
As he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettledrum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge. Shakespeare. Hamlet.
KEY. n. f. [ceg, Saxon.]
1. An instrument formed with cavities correspondent to the wards of a lock, by which the bolt of a lock is pushed forward or backward.
If a man were porter of hellgate, he should have old turning the key. Shakespeare. Macbeth.
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to th' poor. Shakespeare. King Lear.
Poor key cold figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster.
The glorious standard left to heav'n they spread,
With Peter's keys ennobled and his crown. Fairfax.
Yet some there be, that by due steps aspire
To lay their just hands on that golden key,
That opens the palace of eternity. Milton.
Conscience is its own counsellor, the sole master of its own secrets; and it is the privilege of our nature, that every man should keep the key of his own breast. South's Sermons.
Hecame, and knocking thrice, without delay
The longing lady heard, and turn'd the key. Dryden.
I keep her in one room, I lock it;
The key, look here, is in this pocket. Prior.

KIC

2. An instrument by which something is screwed or turned.
Hide the key of the jack. Swif.
3. An explanation of any thing difficult.
An emblem without a key to't, is no more than a tale of a tub. L'Estrange.
These notions, in the writings of the ancients darkly delivered, receive a clearer light when compared with this theory, which represents every thing plainly, and is a key to their thoughts. Burnet's Theory of the Earth.
Those who are accustomed to reason have got the true key of books. Locke.
4. The parts of a musical instrument which are struck with the fingers.
Pamela loves to handle the spinnet, and touch the keys. Pam.
5. [In music.] Is a certain tone whereto every composition, whether long or short, ought to be fitted; and this key is said to be either flat or sharp, not in respect of its own nature, but with relation to the flat or sharp third, which is joined with it. Harris.
Hippolita, I wou'd thee with my sword,
And won't thy love, doing thee injuries;
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling. Shakespeare.
But speak you with a sad brow? Or do you play the flouting Jack? Come, in what key shall a man take you to go in the song? Shakespeare. Much Ado about Nothing.
Not know my voice! Oh, time's extremity!
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue
In sev'n short years, that here my only son Knows not my feeble key of untun'd cares? Shakespeare.
6. [Kaye, Dutch; quai, French.] A bank raised perpendicular for the ease of lading and unlading ships.
A key of fire ran along the shore, Dryden.
And lighten'd all the river with a blaze.
KE'YAGE. n. f. [from key.] Money paid for lying at the key. Ainsworth.
KEVHO'LE. n. f. [key and hole.] The perforation in the door or lock through which the key is put.
Make doors fast upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the cafeament; shut that, and 'twill out at the keyhole. Shakespeare.
I looked in at the keyhole, and saw a well-made man. Tatler.
I keep her in one room; I lock it;
The key, look here, is in this pocket;
The keyhole is that left? Most certain. Prior.
KEYSTONE. n. f. [key and stone.] The middle stone of an arch.
If you will add a keystone and chaptrals to the arch, let the breadth of the upper part of the keystone be the height of the arch. Moxon's Mech. Exerc.
KIBE. n. f. [from kerb, a cut, German, Skinner; from kibwe, Welsh, Minibwe.] An ulcerated chilblain; a chap in the heel caused by the cold.
If 'twere a kibe, 'twould put me to my slipper. Shakespeare.
The toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of our courtier, that it galls his kibe. Shakespeare's Hamlet.
One boast of the cure, calling them a few kibes. Wifeman.
KIBED. adj. [from kibe.] Troubled with kibes: as kibed heels.
To KICK. v. a. [kauchen, German; calco, Latin.] To strike with the foot.
He must endure and digest all affronts, adore the foot that kicks him, and kiss the hand that strikes him. South.
It anger'd Turenne once upon a day,
To see a footman kick'd that took his pay. Pope.
Another, whose son had employments at court, that valued not, now and then, a kicking or a caning. Swift.
To KICK. v. n. To beat the foot in anger or contempt.
Wherefore kick ye at my sacrifice, which I have commanded? 1 Sa. ii. 29.
Jethurun waxed fat and kicked. Deutr. xxxii. 15.
The doctrines of the holy Scriptures are terrible enemies to wicked men, and this is that which makes them kick against religion, and spurn at the doctrines of that holy book. Tillot.
KICK. n. f. [from the verb.] A blow with the foot.
What, are you dumb? Quick, with your answer, quick,
Before my foot salutes you with a kick. Dryden. Juvenal.
KICKER. n. f. [from kick.] One who strikes with his foot.
KICKSHAW. n. f. [This word is supposed, I think with truth, to be only a corruption of quelque chose, something; yet Milton seems to have understood it otherwise; for he writes it kick-shaw, and seems to think it used in contempt of dancing.]
1. Something uncommon; fantastical; something ridiculous.
Shall we need the monstres of Paris to take our hopeful youth into their slight and prodigal custodies, and send them over back again transformed into mimicks, apes, and kick-shaws? Milton.
2. A dish so changed by the cookery that it can scarcely be known.
Some pigeons, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaw. Shakespeare. H. IV.
In wit, as well as war, they give us vigour;
Cressy was lost by kickshaws and soup-meagre. Fenton.
KICKSTICKSEY. n. f. [from kick and wince.] A made word in ridicule and disdain of a wife. Hammer.
